

Women Brave Chill At Chevy Chase To Bring Golf Tournament Nearer End

TWELVE WOMEN REMAIN IN GOLF AT CHEVY CHASE

Mrs. Ormsby McCammon Wins From Mrs. Jackson by Score of 1 Up.

PREDICTED AS FINALIST

Mrs. Stetson and Miss Hacker Go 21 Holes to Decide Victor on Links.

Twelve fair golfers braved the chill December weather at Chevy Chase Club today to bring the women's tournament now in progress there one step nearer the close which is due tomorrow. The semi-finals are in process today in the three eights which have survived their way through the match play, and unless calculations go awry, the finals will commence tomorrow at 1 o'clock with three pairs in the competition.

Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, that sterling golfer, if the term may be applied, won further admiration from the followers of the tournament when she played true to form in the first round of match play, defeating Mrs. W. H. Jackson by 1 up. Mrs. McCammon is expected to be a finalist. This is the first time she has played over the "revised" course at Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Jackson is not to be denied great credit for the stiff opposition which she provided for Mrs. McCammon. The result indicates that the decision was reached on the last green and that accurate playing over the other holes brought the match to this close end.

Next to the McCammon-Jackson match, that between Mrs. Stetson and Miss Hacker attracted the attention of the small gallery that faced the cold winds which prevailed. Their match went 21 holes and Mrs. Stetson won by 1 up. They saw-sawed their way through the regular route of 18 holes and added three before a decision could be reached. Their card:

Mrs. Stetson: Out 19 9 8 5 9 7 36 2-18 In 10 8 7 6 6 8 7 7 5-50-18 Miss Hacker: Out 19 9 8 5 9 7 36 2-18 In 10 8 7 6 6 8 7 7 5-50-18

TODAY'S SPORTORIAL

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.

Johnny Evers is out again with more of his vitriolic criticism. This time he takes for his target John K. Tener, president of the National League. If Johnny Evers were in the American League, he would be scalped, drawn and quartered and his ashes would be scattered to the four winds of heaven. But, being in the National League, his latest offense, following so many others, will probably be overlooked. If Tener replies to Evers' latest charge, it will be remarkable, as Tener has the most even temper and affects to scorn the words of such as Evers. The Braves' nervous little field captain and great second baseman was the star of the barnstorming trip of the big leaguers. The crowds turned out everywhere to see him in action and he, naturally, felt happy. So when he got to San Francisco, he told Francis J. Mannix, of the Bulletin, a number of caustic things.

Readers of this column will remember that Evers last summer was charged with saying that the National League race was "fixed." In referring to the "fixed race" charge, Evers is alleged to have said: "Give a dog a bad name—and I've got the name—so it is hard to get away from it. I've read statements in the newspapers purporting to come from me which I would never have dreamed of making. That was the case toward the end of last season when I was quoted as saying the race was fixed. No, I've been in baseball too long to make a statement of that kind. I've been through too many grueling campaigns—have lost too much sleep worrying what the next day was to bring forth—to allow such an idea as that to take hold of me. If there is anyone who appreciates the impossibility of fixing a race, I am that person."

"And yet, before I was given an opportunity to affirm or deny that story, I was condemned by people in my own business and held up as a disgrace to baseball. Why, Governor Tener, president of our league, made a special trip to Boston to 'investigate' me.

"I told Tener and I told the newspapers that my record of fourteen years in baseball wouldn't suffer in the slightest by comparison with Tener's fourteen years in politics.

"And if he had shown the slightest disposition to go ahead with his investigation I would have started one on my own and subjected Tener to the light of publicity. He wouldn't have discovered anything, but I would.

"The story of how the investigation ended never received the publicity that my alleged statement did. The public was not apprised of how Tener came to the club house at Boston. None wrote what happened when the president of the National League came to a move ball player and confessed that he was 'in Dutch,' and how he asked that mere ball player to help him get out of the mess.

Evers goes on to tell how abused he is, and insists that in all his troubles Jim Gaffney, owner of the Braves, stood behind him. Evers gave out this interview before receiving his boss' letter of warning against rowdiness in 1916. The nervous little Brave praisers the Feds for raising the salary of the major league player, forgetting that those same Feds have come close to killing Evers' meal ticket. It is true that his presence in the field made it possible for him to receive $40,000 in 1914, but they may also make it necessary for him to get along on $5,000 a year. Evers is not popular with Boston fans. They know enough about baseball to conclude that his outbursts have hurt the chances of the team. He would like to get away to New York or Chicago. New York doesn't want him and it is doubtful if Chicago would endure his antics, either. From this neck of the woods it would appear as if Johnny were digging his own grave.

Staging the annual American League meeting in Chicago is another evidence of the monarchial rule of Ban B. Johnson. The boss of the circuit rightfully believes Chicago to be a great baseball city, but when he thinks that local publicity will follow a meeting there as would be the case in New York, he's thinking through the top of an felt hat with a hole in the crown. Many a time and oft has Johnson hoodwinked about going to New York for a baseball meeting. He has always claimed that his league should meet in the Windy City, as close to the Fisher building as possible. But every time he has had his way, little or no publicity has followed. As a loyal Chicagoan Johnson holds out for his own town. He will have his way this year—with all its results. When the American Leaguers go through their cut and dried session on December 15, the publicity will be given the gathering of the National Leaguers in New York, simply because most of the news bureaus and most of the sport writers can get to the metropolis more easily than they can to Chicago. Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, and Chicago will have sport writers in the Windy City for the coming meeting, but if it were held in New York every city on the Eastern end of the circuit as well as most of those from those cities named would be represented. Ban Johnson cannot make Chicago a more important city than New York, even by holding the annual meeting there.

Harry Harper shows great common sense in loafing all winter. The young southpaw has been working that wing of his from March to November this year, and he will need all the rest possible before the coming campaign. He has a great future ahead of him. If he can show the necessary control, he should come close to being the best southpaw of the 1916 season, not even barring "Dutch" Leonard or Carl Weiland. He would be standing in his own light if he were to try basketball or some other sport this winter. His rest should do him worlds of good.

All for Glory Run
—Won by Reds Shanley
"Reds" Shanley, of Carroll Institute, with a twenty-second handicap, won first place, doing the course of two and one-half miles in 12 minutes and 10 seconds, in the all for glory run. O'Donnell, of the Gibraltar Athletic Club, came in second place, closely followed by Capt. Dan Healy, of the Carroll Institute Club.

This is likely to be the last of the runs to be held by the Carrolls, as the interest shown by the runners of this city appears to be slack. Following is the order in which they finished:

Name and club	Handicap	Time
Shanley, C. I.	20 seconds	12:10
O'Donnell, G. A. C.	20 seconds	12:15
Healy, C. I.	20 seconds	12:17
Blumer, C. I.	20 seconds	12:18
Dougherty, C. I.	20 seconds	12:12
Schmidt, C. I.	20 seconds	12:15

Charlie Wright is winner of the tournament at Frank Sherman's alleys, having rolled a duckpin set of 354 in the finals. Mancum was second with 321, and Bill Rider finished third with a score of 315. The prizes were $10, $5, and $3, respectively. Pratt, who went to the front on Thanksgiving Day in the qualification rounds, spilled but 291 in the roll-off.

"Pop" Halley's rolling was watched throughout the early games, and while he was one of the ten to qualify, he did not appear for the finals.

That cold snap kept a host of the boys inside last night, and then there were those who couldn't get home after they once got out. However, there were several high scores contributed.

Some of the best bowling seen was developed in the Gandil-Mt. Pleasant set. In the Arcade Duckpin League, when Mueller and Gusdorf rolled high scores of 131 and 129, respectively. McClure of Princeton came through with 128, and Mark delivered a 127 game for the Superials, in the Northeast circuit.

Pratt, of Land Office, rolled up to form when his second game soared to 125. This bowler is coming to the front rapidly, and his scores have been watched closely by followers of the game for some time.

LOR ANGELLES, Dec. 1.—Jimmy Johnston is here, ready to "listen to reason," or rather to the beckoning call of cold hard cash. Johnston isn't working for his health. He is just like the rest of us. Wherever the big money is there Johnston will be.

The Oakland outfielder arrived from the Imperial valley in answer to word received from President Charles Ebbetts, of the Brooklyn National League ball club, who wanted Johnston to jump back from the Feds and join Brooklyn.

Ebbetts and Johnston got together but did not come to terms. When reached on the telephone Johnston declared that he probably would stick by his Federal League contract. But Jimmy added: "If I find a better berth I might accept, no matter where it is. I will leave for my home in Chattanooga, Tenn., and will stay there during the winter months."

In reply to a question, Johnston stated that he did not have another engagement with the Brooklyn magnate, but he did not infer that negotiations were off by any means.

When interviewed Ebbetts was confident that Johnston would sign with the Imperial valley in answer to word received from President Charles Ebbetts, of the Brooklyn National League ball club, who wanted Johnston to jump back from the Feds and join Brooklyn.

There are thirteen candidates for the four graduate positions and twenty-one for the undergraduate positions. As a usual rule there are only enough graduate candidates to about fill the vacant positions each year. Dr. Carl Williams has refused the nomination, which he started the rumor that he is to be head football coach next year.

Glover's chances were considered small because of his recent defeat at the hands of Lewis, but the South Boston boy demonstrated that he was there in every way.
